

'The Boy Who Cried Bigfoot' by Scott Magoon

Learning activities Week Three

I hope you enjoyed last week's learning activities about the book! Here are your activities for this week:

- 1) Use your ideas about the new creature you thought of last week to plan a new story called 'The Boy who cried' (using your creature's name!). Make a story map of your new story, keeping the boy and the people the same but just changing the creature and what happens at the end of the story. Once you have planned it, write your story. Think about the skills you are using (check the skills mat that was sent home in your home learning pack) and try to make your handwriting your best! 😊
- 2) In the story, Bigfoot is actually happy and friendly towards the boy. How can you be a good friend? Make a poster with drawings and explain ways that you can be a good friend to someone.
- 3) In the story, Bigfoot really likes the boy's bike. Can you create a cool, new bike that Bigfoot would like? Think about what size it might be (big enough for a Bigfoot!), what it would look like and what colours it might be. You could, draw, paint, collage or even model make your own bike. Be as imaginative as you can!
- 4) Imagine that you are Bigfoot travelling into different rooms of your house. Measure how many Bigfoot steps it takes you to get from one room to another. See if there are any other ways that you could measure the distance between the different rooms in your house, what different objects could you use? eg. How many lego bricks does it take you to get from the kitchen to the living room? If you have a measuring tape you could use this too!
